ted and coaxed with all kinds of fer- caused any decrease in the acreage. tilizers in order to grow even 5-cent cotton while the broad prairies of that never wears out-with plenty of room for the most expansive farming.

Then, on the other hand, when one sees monster cotton mills rearing their smokestacks from every city and village in this old province of South Carolina, his mind sorrowfully reverts to Texas with her half a dozen cotton factories spinning a few hundred bales from a three million crop.

If South Carotina and her people could be dropped into one of the big unoccupied counties of Texas and her cotton mills and her people scattered over this great domain, both States would be benefited. South Carolina needs several thousand acres of Texas land for her farmers. If the agricultural classes there are to be compelled to make the soil over and over again year after year, fertilizer factories will soon be as numerous and as necessary as are her cotton mills. If Texas farmers are to continue raising nearly onethird of the south's cotton crop with no mills in the State to buy the staple, they will not receive a full return for their labor, nor will they be able to purchase cotton goods at their proper values. It is certainly an injustice to make a farmer pay for the cost of transporting cotton from Texas to New England and then force him to pay the freight on the manufactured goods returned to this State. But such will be the case until we have some home spinners to buy the cotton and to sell the goods manufactured

There is probably not a County in South Carolina that is without a cotton mill, while many of them have over a dozen. Spartanburg boasts 26 factories for manufacturing cotton goods in some form or other, and these factories have made that one of the most prosperous and thickly settled Counties to be found in any Southern State. Strange to say every cotton mill in South Carolina, with only three or four exceptions, has proved a paying investment, and the stockholders have netted good dividends during the very years that were proving so disastrous to New!England manufacturers.

Each mill employs from 400 to 1,200 operatives, and with over 100 factories in the State it is safe to estimate that this industry gives employment to nearly 100,000 persons.

I watched; the workers leaving the factory at Columbia one afternoon, and it seemed to me that the stream of humanity pouring from that big brick building would never end. The operatives consisted mainly of women and children, though a large number of men emingled with the throng. They all crossed over to the factory village, forming Columbia's suburbs, where there were hundreds of neat little cottages for them. These cottages are nearly always built by the mill owners and are sold or rented to the employes. The rent is very low and merely represents the actual worth, no profit whatever being extorted from the operatives. I was told that a single room rented for from 50 cents to $1 per month, while a three-room cottage brought $2.50 to $4.00. In nearly every place where there is a cotton mill the operatives live in cottages thus erected and where there are several mills in one city the factory part of the town is often the most thickly populated.

These cotton mills were undoubtedly forced upon South Carolina and now that they are there they have enriched the State in many ways. Factories became a necessity in that State in order to give employment to an increasing population that could not be supported by tilling the wornout soils. of the product of these manufactures is used to enrich Carolina farms. Near the rivers and on the sea islands

South Carolina is less than one-! dose of fertilizing. It is indeed piti eighth the size of Texas. But South ful to pass miles upon miles of farms Carolina has 45 people to every square that have been saturated with costly mile, while Texas has just a fraction | fertilizers, and to see men, women and children bending their backs over cot-Texas raises over four times the ton stalks that do not average more amount of cotton that is produced in than two and a half feet in height,

But South Carolina has sell-this fall for a little less than 5 mills that spin more cotton than the cents a pound. No wonder that many State raises, while Texas does not consoli the soil tillers in that State are same 2 per cent, of her enormous and leaving the cotton fields for cotton factories. And yet South Carolina These are two of the most striking raises a large crop of cotton, when the contrasts that present themselves to size of the State is taken into considthe visitor from Texas. Taking it all in all Texas farmers Texas offer such rich soil-soil that is are more fortunate than those of the made fertile by nature's hand and Carolinas, but Texas as a State could well follow the little sister's example in securing textile mills. We followed her in secession days and we never regretted it. We jumped to arms when she fired the first shot and we are still proud of it. We went back into the union with her gracefully, if not cheerfully. She, however, has been the first to grasp from the men she fought in the 60's the mills and factories that belong to the South the same as do the cotton fields. Let us follow the little rebel's lead again. M. E. F

Hogs Fed on Liquor. All Sorts of Paragraphs.

HARODSBURG, Ky., Sept. 18.-People here have experimented and discovered a method of securing the best pork in the world.

Several weeks ago a drove of fifty hogs was turned in on a trough of fermented beer, which is Bourbon whiskey in its first stage. The porkers took to this new diet greedily, and the en- iliary. tire lot of hogs were absolutely intoxicated for about three weeks until the swill gave out. They would gulp down the beer until they could hold no more, stagger off, drop down anywhere in a stupor, sleep it off and then go and repeat the dose.

The sight of from thirty to fifty intoxicated hogs, some fighting, some too stupid to fight and some rolling down the hill into the distillery branch from which they had to be rescued from drowning, was a novel one, and attracted the attention of many neighbors. When the beer gave out they would neither eat anything else nor be comforted, and it was absolutely pitiful to see and hear them squealing around the troughs.

These fat shoats were killed yesterday and butchered, and their meat unanimously pronounced to be the best flavored, tenderest and most savory pork ever tasted .- Chicago Chroni-

Hearts Unite Across the Mason and Dixon Line.

The untimely death of the "daugh ter of the Confederacy" has evoked a sad wail of grief from the entire South, united once more in an expression of love and sympathy that does honor to the brave hearts that cluster their memories of the past around this beautiful and amiable voman.

Yet we cannot suffer our brethren south of the Mason and Dixon line to monopolize the sorrow that the whole country feels at the death of Miss Winnie Davis.

We have not here the veteran associations of the Confederacy, or those strong personal feelings of acquaintance and intimate companionship that never die, but it must not be forgotten that Mrs. Jefferson Davis and her lamented daughter have been constant and welcome visitors at the North for many years, and have won a place in our affections second only to the homage which was their due at home.

We of the North would join in the sweet and mournful sentiments expressed in the South because of Miss Davis' worth and for the sake of the bereaved mother's loss.

Let us be brothers in grief as we were only the other day at Santiago brothers in arms .- New York Herald.

It was then that the captain made the remark quoted above. - Brooklyn Eagle.
